DOESN'T KNOW WHY HE GAVE UP MONEY

Assistant Cashier in Customs Office Under "Control" of Treasurer.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—Whether the influence of partisan politics or some mysterious psychic or hypnotic suggestion caused the paying out of over $5,000 in the United States Customs office in St. Louis in 1906 by Assistant Cashier A. A. Broadhead to Treasurer A. F. Shriver, was the question which the House Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department had to wrestle with to-day. Shriver was sent to prison for one year for embezzlement and Broadhead was before the committee to tell how he came to give Shriver the money. The committee is trying to determine whether it shall undertake an investigation of the customs office and Sub-treasury at St. Louis because of shortages in the funds there, as demanded in a resolution by Representative Shackleford (Democrat), of Missouri.

"I don't know why I gave Shriver the money," Broadhead told the committee, "but he completely dominated me and controlled me. He did everything in the office. I believed in him absolutely and so when he told me he was short and wanted my cash to make it good I gave it to him. That may seem incomprehensible, gentlemen, but it is true. Then, too, I thought he was rich because he married a wealthy woman, and would pay me back, but he never did, and I had to make good the amount out of my private funds."

Representative Garner, of Texas, asked if it was not because Shriver was secretary of the Republican County Committee of St. Louis and controlled his (Broadhead's) job, that the latter was so absolutely in Shriver's control. Broadhead said that it was something more than that.

IN CLASH OVER USE OF ELEVATOR

PRINCESS PARLAGHY, who refused to let Duchess of Manchester ride in Hotel elevator with her.

DUCHESS OF MANCHESTER, Formerly Miss Helen Zimmerman, Ordered from Hotel Lift at Princess's Command.

PRINCESS VERY SORRY SHE MONOPOLIZED LIFT

Her Regrets for Turning Duchess of Manchester Out of Hotel Elevator Unofficially Intimated. Both Have Been Washington Visitors.

New York, April 27.—Little did the times accompanied by large retinues of servants and various breeds of animals and feathered friends, gave orders that no one excepting her servants should ride in her elevator at the hotel when she was in it.

Several days ago the Duchess of Manchester stopped into the same elevator with the princess, neither knowing the other's identity. As the elevator conductor was about to close the door the princess, by an eloquent nod, gave the high sign to servant number one, who passed it on to servant number two, and in a moment the elevator conductor got the news that the Duchess of Manchester was persona non grata in the elevator at that particular time.

She was asked to step out, which she did. A few moments later her husband, who has visited Washington at various heard the story and became much wrought up. The intended trip to the Vanderbilt home prevented the duke from looking into the incident, which has spread all about town and set gossiping tongues wagging and prophecying what will happen if the princess changes her mind and does not offer to let the duchess play in her back yard.

ALLEGED FRAUDS ARE BEING PROBED

Jewelry Swindlers May Have Secured Amount Approaching $2,000,000.

Washington, D. C., April 27.—Preliminary hearing before a United States Commissioner for the nine persons arrested as a result of the investigation by the Department of Justice into the alleged jewelry bankrupt frauds has been set for April 29. The alleged frauds upon various merchants throughout the United States are estimated at from $500,000 to $2,000,000. It is alleged that the acts complained of not only violated the bankruptcy laws, but prosecution also might lie under the conspiracy laws.

The methods of operation of the defendants is thus described by the Department of Justice: "What purported to be a legitimate jewelry store was started and large quantities of expensive jewelry were obtained from firms in different parts of the country. Shortly afterwards the jewelry was removed from the store and a pretense was made of shipping it to some other point for the purpose of having a public sale. The sale was duly advertised to take place at a given date.

"In the meantime the building to which the jewelry was pretended to have been shipped was destroyed by fire, together with the packages purporting to contain the jewelry in question. The parties then went into bankruptcy and succeeded in relieving themselves of all their financial obligations. At a later date the jewelry which was supposed to have been consumed in the fire, but which in the meantime had been concealed, was shipped to another part of the State and sold at greatly reduced prices by parties connected with the conspiracy.

"It also appears that, in carrying out these operations, the parties involved have been guilty of perjury, of the fraudulent use of the mails, and possibly of violations of other laws of the United States. Full evidence has been obtained by the government regarding these violations of law."

Officials of the department intimate that the end is not yet in sight. There will be other arrests before the inquiry now underway is completed. Indictments of the persons arrested are probable under the bankruptcy or conspiracy laws and possibly in some instances for perjury.

Business establishments in Montgomery and in Greenville, Ala., are mentioned in the reports coming to the department as places where alleged illegitimate jewelry stores were maintained, where supplies were accumulated, and afterwards shifted to other parts of the State.
